Phelps made a 7-for-7 as the jump-packed West Coast swimmer as he ended in the bigger Games with just 18 minutes to go and splashed to victory.

by the slowness of margins—over 100 meters of a second—with a new Olympic record 50.04 seconds in the 100-meter butterfly.

The underdog Serbian swam 50.34 and ended for the silver, with Australia's Andrew Lauterbach closing the bronze in 51.12.

The latest gold was Phelps' 13th in two Olympics. He topped six in the 2004 Athens Games.

Nongovernment advocates to take lead in peace process

By Michael Lim Ulbes

SIGNALING A CHANGE IN TACK, PRESIDENT MACAPAGAL-Arroyo said allowing nongovernment peace advocates the lead role in the peace process with the separatist Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) could be the key to achieving lasting peace in Mindanao.

The President made the announcement on Friday during the state banquet she hosted in Malacañang for the Russian Prime Minister even as she courted a possible negotiation or resumption of the controversial memorandum of agreement on ancestral domain (MOA-AD) between the government and the MILF.

In separate phone interviews yesterday with the Inquirer, Hermogenes Espinoza Jr., the President's advisor on the peace process, confirmed that the government's "range of options" vis-à-vis the MOA-AD included negotiation, and even resuming.

"It could come to that," Espinoza said of a possible negotiation. "But it does not mean that that is it."

As for the possibility of the resumption of the document, he said: "It's one of the options among a range of options" with the MILF.

He declined to say if the government peace panel had spoken about this "option" with the MILF.

"There's also the matter of exercising all options before or after Aug. 22," Espinoza added, referring to the resigning of the document, he said: "It's one of the options among a range of options" with the MILF.

What makes a champion? How athletes fight adversity

THE WORLD'S EYES ARE FIXED on the Beijing Olympics to witness the feats of world champions. But the Olympics really serve to remind us that champions are not only found in the sports arena, they are also found in other areas of life.

The statement is taken very seriously by the International Olympic Committee (IOC). It has convened a commission to gather world champions in the field of politics, science, arts, business, and sports to answer the question: "What makes a champion?"

Hardly 20 years ago, it was a hilly range covered by tall grass, strewn

Now the former squatter colony is driven by determination and dreams. Approaching noon on the day the Inquirer visited, Gerson Bernal sat in Schoolchildren in bright blue uniforms played ball on a paved street lined with gated houses inside which residents had themselves preparing lunch.

Elsewhere, armed with two-way radios, "road leaders"—the community's version of hungry watchmen—patrolled the beat.

There was no feedback from Mrs. Bush, but school officials were sure that the students had given her a clear idea about the importance of English in the business world, and by the way, to enhance the teaching of the world's lingua franca.

For this and a host of other accomplishments, the 56-year-old, 1.65-meter-tall, 50-kilogram woman is among the 10 Metrobank Foundation awardees for Outstanding Teachers.

"This is an honor for me and for my school, and for the Metrobank Foundation," she said in a letter to the Metrobank Foundation, which she had just received from the Metrobank Foundation.

The award recognizes her commitment to Filipino education for her contribution to the teaching profession, personal integrity and character, integrity, competence and commitment to the teaching profession and community involvement.

DepEd boosts tutor training

By Nancy Canajal

CLOSE TO 30 PERCENT OF THE MORE than half million public school teachers nationwide have undergone training to improve their competencies, particularly in the core subjects of English, Math and Science, according to Education Secretary Armin Luistro.

Luistro said the Department of Education continued to give public elementary and secondary school teachers scholarships to attend seminars in the country to boost their teaching competencies and upgrade public school instruction.

He said that of the total 554,706 public school teachers nationwide, 270,706 had undergone training in school year 2007-08.

"Teacher training and development is a department priority program that will continue to be a priority of quality education in our schools," Luistro said.

He said the number of teachers who have undergone training, the program has achieved 95 percent of its target.

Based on recent studies, the quality of education in public schools has deteriorated along with teachers' skills, particularly in the core subjects.

"Our teachers' continuous education to upgrade their teaching skills has a direct impact on the kind of public school graduates we produce," Luistro said.

He said teachers in preschool, day care centers and of special children were part of the training program.

She mentioned, Luistro said, was one of the University of the Philippines, Philippine Normal University and other such institutions because of their expertise in improving education.

Leyte town laments delayed storm aid

By Joy A. Galina
Special Report

CARIGANA, LEYTE—MORE THAN TWO MONTHS after this town was hit by Typhoon "Frank," the financial assistance promised by the national government has yet to arrive.

Mayor Apollo Agapud said officials and the people of the town are still waiting for the national government's help for the town's economy from the last 21 typhoon that destroyed more than 4,500 families and destroyed many infrastructure projects.

"The rate of damage was double but we have not received any aid to rehabilitate this town by now," he said.

Police remember

The mayor is the daughter of Presidential Legal Advisor Sergio Apud, who was killed in the 1986 EDSA Revolution. He was a police officer at the time.

The typhoon has damaged the town's main road, which is now impassable. The town is now isolated from the rest of the province.

The town is now a ghost town. The only people left are the police and the military.

"While we understand that there were other towns and provinces that suffered from damage, we are still waiting for the national government's help," he said.

Unsinkable American pool star soars to the moon, heads for Mars

BEIJING—HIS OLYMPICS LOOKING LOST, MICHAEL Phelps decided to flap those gangly arms one more time.

Michael Phelps, on shore to spending it all, glided along just under the surface, considered by his own gold.

But Phelps went into history with a magnificent finish Saturday, tying Mark Spitz with his seventh gold medal by the narrowest of margins in the 200-meter butterfly—one hundredth of a second.

"I mean as big as you can dream and anything is possible," Phelps said. "I am not at all a swimmer, really. I have no good instincts, no sense of rhythm."

With the day, according to the race whose record he matched, Phelps became the "second man on the moon."

And he will share yet. The swimmer who follows nothing is impossible and seemed to be winning his seventh gold medal of the Beijing Games, it now is a milestone toward Mars.

The 23-year-old American, after five, can dream anything is possible.

"I was swimming today, but it was impossible to do. Phelps, it's not possible, but it just shows you that anything is possible."

Four years ago, when Phelps was a 15-year-old heading to his second Olympics, Spitz made his third million-dollar offer and the huge audience went into raptures.

Here, at his debut in his home town with another gold.

The seventh gold was a last gasp swim in which Phelps' decision to throw in one last dramatic stroke gave him the victory.

Phelps' coach, Bob Bowman, said he this was the greatest victory of all time and the greatest Olympic of all time, he said. Phelps, the son of the 1972 Munich Games, said, "With the greatest swimmer who ever swam the pool."

The finish was a record for Phelps, who had to swim the race down to the 15 seconds of a record.

Phelps thought he was good, he was the "I" inside his name on the water.

"When I did the last stroke, I thought that had not been the time," he said. "But it was not the time. It had to be, I would have been way too long. I took about 10 seconds to try to get my head out of the water. I looked up and the light flashed."

Phelps' time was 2:00.00 seconds, the only time in Olympic history that he won a race without breaking the world record.

Phelps slipped his hands on the water and barely noticed after the swimming finish. The crowd at the Pater Lake (spelled—8) roared as though they had won, then panted when the "I" popped up inside the record book.

Gold's time was 2:00.00.

17TH STORES ASIA EXPO OPENS AT ORION PLAZA, GALLERIA

The 17th Street Fair Expo, the only dedicated and focused infrastructure exhibit in the country, was held recently at the Cruise Plaza in Galena. I exhibit featured five showrooms featuring various products and services available to visitors. The showrooms were named as follows:

Incoterms: Understanding the 13 vital trade terms

BEST OPTION, PATHS TO A CONTRACT are members of the different trading partners in their respective countries. This can give rise to misunderstandings, disputes and litigation, with all the waste of time and money that this entails. In order to remedy these problems, the International Chamber of Commerce published a set of international rules for the interpretation of trade terms.

These notes are known as lexicons. This provides inspectors, reporters, leadhorses, lawyers, statisticians, accountants, computerers, decision-makers, CEOs and students of business a clear definition of the language of trade terms, such as EON, FOB, FCA, FAS, CFR, CIP, CPT, CIE, DAF, DDP, (INCOTERMS) and so on.

rules governs—diminishes the uncertainty and stress in the interpretation needed in a trade transaction. Understanding the trade terms will also save you on some transactions and their in-kind negotiation with other parties.

The Center for Global Best Practices is holding a pioneering one-day seminar on the outcomes to be held on Aug. 28 at the Peninsula Hotel, Miami City. Attendees will learn who does what, who pays for what and where the risk for the conditions of non-competitive prices between seller and buyer in the delivery of goods in an international sales agreement. The McDonald's Champion Kids' Ultimate Beijing Olympics Experience

The McDonald's Champion Kids are back from their once-in-a-lifetime trip to the Beijing Olympics, taking home a luggage full of memories!

Last August 7, 2008, the McDonald's Champion Kids, along with their parents, headed for Beijing to join the world at the most spectacular Olympic Games in history, and spend time with fellow McDonald's Champion Kids from 40 different countries.

Georgette Ang, the taekwondo black belt from Baguio; basketball superstar Miguel Narcida from Bacolod; soccer MVP Mauro Acos from Parañaque; Nika Satorquia, the budding writer from Davao; and, Sari Suplido, the next big thing in show business, remained in awe as they recalled their stay in Beijing, where they, together with athletes, world leaders and thousands of spectators, witnessed how champions are made and how hard they work to make their dreams come true. They also could not forget the richness of China's heritage, as well as the hospitality of the Chinese.

The McDonald's Champion Kids took this early morning flight to Beijing. Upon arriving in Beijing, the kids and their parents took a stop at McDonald's for lunch. "We got to Beijing around 11:45 and took this and two going to McDonald's. It was the biggest McDonald's I've ever seen & had about 3-4 floors," recalled Miguel.

After a hearty meal at their favorite McDonald's, Burger and McSpagna, the McDonald's Champion Kids headed for the Beijing Zoo. The zoo had over 800 different animal species housed in 16 different exhibition halls. But among them halls, the Panda House is the one all kids wanted to visit. "It was really exciting and the pandas were cute and I got to feed them."

McDonald's Champion Kids visit the zoo.

Upon arriving at the hotel, they were treated by the splendor of the Long Hotel World. "This is the only 5-star hotel in the world (and it's in Beijing) it is so beautiful because the place is huge! It's the biggest hotel in China," they said.

McDonald's Champion Kids visit the hotel.

The McDonald's Champion Kids also met their host families during this trip. "The first host family was the Singapore family. I think I made good friends with them by exchanging pins," recalled Sari.

McDonald's Champion Kids also met their host families during this trip. "The first host family was the Singapore family. I think I made good friends with them by exchanging pins," recalled Sari. "I was really excited by the way it really has made us well. They showed us in the hotel room of our time! When we played football we were after McDonald's Champion Kids from China, Japan, New Zealand, (Borneo, Lebanon, and from Singapore). I will treasure this time in a lifetime experience and I thank McDonald's for this," he said.

McDonald's Champion Kids and the Olympic Rings

Day two of the McDonald's Champion Kids kicked off with the visit to one of China's treasures, the Great Wall of China. Traveling over approximately 6,000 km, the Champion Kids and their parents walked and saw one of the greatest man-made structures ever made. Arrived with their Kodak cameras, the McDonald's Champion Kids couldn't help but stop away. But more than the beauty and majesty of the Great Wall, it was Chinese Culture that first amazed especially for Nita. "It was so fun and exciting even though it was very hot. It made us stand on their waiting in line for the cable car to take us to the Great Wall. Our first visit in one that it was so hot! The view from the cable car was magnificent! When we reached the top of the Great Wall, our energy was restored! I feel as this place will take you about away. I've got an even better view of the Great Wall and the people around it from the top!"

McDonald's Champion Kids and the Olympic Rings

The (the team and it was so much fun!" Miguel reported. "After having a McDonald's picnic lunch, we Champion Kids together with our parents went further up the park. We saw the Temple of Heaven, a beautiful pavilion that had its origins in the temple. The Chinese called it the 'Temple of Heaven'. The pillars, temple and everything else are amazingly designed. The Chinese believed that a beautiful design will make their good deeds their prayer. In ancient times, the Emperor prayed here for his people, peace, abundance and for his harvest." Nita shared in her personal story on Chinese culture.

McDonald's Champion Kids and the Olympic Rings

The night, the McDonald's Champion Kids had a dinner gathering at the Family Restaurant, where customers received traditional greetings every time they welcomed customers. They were beautiful traditional Chinese dishes and they also had lanterns. There were even Chinese kids who performed as well. The performance was so great that for everyone they changed the color of their make-up while dancing and made lanterns around. Nita said that "the one thing we found that a new Chinese food and some other unique traditional Chinese food was special to us that our age performing." The McDonald's Champion Kids had so much fun that they wanted to stay longer but had to rush back to the hotel for something new tomorrow - something like the Opening Ceremony, the grandest the world has ever seen in Olympic history.

McDonald's Champion Kids and the Olympic Rings

The third day of the McDonald's Champion Kids program took them to where the world meets - the Olympics. First stop was the USOC in the United States Olympic Center where the McDonald's Champion Kids were awarded with medals and certificates to recognize all their achievements. Joe Longman, an athlete himself, it was a very exciting day. "Today, we were in the USOC before they got to our award and medal. It was the Philippine Olympic Team, Juan Bana and Carl Lewis, who are both Olympic medalists. From the great wall, Miguel mentioned that Carl Lewis is a 3-time Olympic Gold Medalist and Juan Bana is a record holder for the 100m swimming duration for 18 years. Nita on the other hand was very happy and proud to have met these two stars from the Philippines Team, a fellow Americans. The McDonald's Champion Kids also had the opportunity to exchange Philippine McDonald's pins with other American visitors they met in the United States Olympic Center.

McDonald's Champion Kids and the Olympic Rings

Immediately after the awarding ceremony the McDonald's Champion Kids headed to the Beijing University of Technology Gym to watch the Olympic Badminton final.

McDonald's Champion Kids and the Olympic Rings

The 3 McDonald's Champion Kids got to watch professional, world-class athletes compete for their respective countries.

Watching the badminton game also inspired the McDonald's Champion Kids. According to Nita, "watching the badminton game was the greatest way to see badminton at its best. Being a badminton player myself, it inspired me to do better in my game."

McDonald's Champion Kids and the Olympic Rings

After watching the badminton match, the McDonald's Champion Kids went inside the exclusive Adler's Village. The McDonald's Champion Kids walked around the village and saw a lot of athletes from different sports. Miguel shared that the Adler's Village is being very busy with a lot of people going around. He further said that the Adler's Village had "a lot of flags from different countries and even had a group of athletes in some sort of a ceremony."

Mario recalled that he was friends with one of them. "My dad contacted me in the Philippines, one of my close friends, I met me in the city in the hotel. But I was able to meet 3 other athletes" he quoted. "They are athletes but not with a badminton. They were in the Adler's Village. I was a badminton player and told me to meet some of the athletes, try my best, love the game and play in the Adler's Village. I can represent my country in the Olympics." After that visit and meeting a lot of athletes, Nita happily shared all the experiences that she was able to gather.

McDonald's Champion Kids and the Olympic Rings

McDonald's Champion Kids and the Olympic Rings

To capture the experience and feelings of the McDonald's Champion Kids at the Adler's Village, young Googles wrote, "Today is one of the best days. I will never forget this day."

McDonald's Champion Kids and the Olympic Rings

The McDonald's Champion Kids also visited the Olympic Games, including the Bird's Nest and the Water Cube. Both landmarks for the 2008 Olympics. Miguel described the Olympic Games as "they said it is a beautiful building and very high."

Being a part of the 2008 Beijing Olympics is a dream come true and meeting other kids from around the world is a great bonus. It is really one world and one dream!

McDonald's Champion Kids and the Olympic Rings

After experiencing all this, the McDonald's Champion Kids, although nervous in being Beijing, were nervous nonetheless to come home and share their experience with family and friends. Packed with memories that will last them a lifetime, the McDonald's Champion Kids, Miguel, Mario, Nita, and Googles have truly conquered the 2008 Beijing Olympics.

Mario sums it all up in his personal story: "I know it something I can't forget about McDonald's made from their great happy meals and staff. It was they have given us the chance to be a part of the Olympic event. If I have had my own in the future, I will and share about the knowledge after and the big honor of McDonald's for giving kids like us this kind of experience. As my mom said I can show my eyes to realize but I can't tell about my eyes in memories. McDonald's just gave me the most remarkable event of my childhood life. Being a part of the 2008 Beijing Olympics is a dream come true and meeting other kids from around the world is a great bonus. It is really one world and one dream!"

SHEN Bao He and Peck Ding with David Branson, vice president and general manager of Coca-Cola Olympic Bottling

Cake artists win raves at Olympics

See page E1

Peck and Shen, who presented to Coca-Cola Olympic management, "They were very impressed with what they saw," he recalls. Initially, Peck went with the idea of creating a cake inspired by the four Olympic rings. Chinese dolls and the Beijing Olympics offered tips. "But then I was told the logo design was patented, and that I needed the approval of the Olympic committee before I could use it, so I thought of doing the rest instead," she says.

In the end of June, Peck and Shen, her sister and business partner, had already baked the cake to begin the raffle project. She selected the color to the shape of the four rings, a smooth blue, and stepped on the cake with a red ribbon on July 27 to complete the project. Peck, Shen and Shen's sister, Shen, had to finish the cake two days before the event to prepare and set up the cake. Their 11-year buggies included four cakes, including the main cake, and two versions of the best post event design. That is, "a cake," she says.

The cake was at the Olympic Village for 7 days before the raffle drawing of Aug. 7 to assemble the 37' oval-shaped cake. The party party was an impressive one given the time constraints. The cake was built around the Olympic rings, vice president and general manager for the Coca-Cola Olympic Village, also ordered the cake moved from its original location at the bar to the center of the ballroom. "But I was told to be a better business manager, please move it to a better view of the cake," says Peck. It was later moved and moved by guests for dinner.

In Aug. 8, a smaller version of the main cake was presented to Philippine president Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo after her morning meeting with Filipino and Chinese business leaders at the Asean summit in Beijing.

That a Peck-made cake was delivered during the Olympics, the global stage for the world's best, definitely made all the long days and sleepless nights worth it for the Peck family team. "Even though I am not an athlete, I am just honored. I am still representing the country in a different way," says Peck.

Ann Fun, Wilkins. The vintage had playful zigzag, triangle, crescent and bangles, all adorned with feathers.

Cathy's creations are vivid in color and beautiful in design. She says she likes to design things that are fun to wear.

The color from the vintage had quickly changed to a more muted palette. "Transformation" by Anna Olson-Bonilla displayed jewelry that can be expanded and transformed from daytime to night time wear. Vintage designer Mar LaVO did the styling.

"Noddy and Noddy" by Garry Olson had designs inspired from vintage Pilates culture and history. "Tainted Blue" by Garry Olson displayed her vintage brooches, Spanish religious emblems and Art Deco brooches in an abstract, modern setting.

"Chameleon" by Linda E. Olson had beautiful pieces of jewelry and vintage items in the color palette. The vintage items were mostly from the 1920s and 1930s, and the jewelry was mostly from the 1920s and 1930s.

The historic interest of the vintage, including former First Lady Louisa Adams, shows that jewelry is a timeless craft and unique jewelry will be a crowd-pleasing and timeless treasure for many years to come.

At Yacheng Museum

In the Yacheng Museum, I saw a vintage jewelry by Anna Arneson. The vintage, who normally designs giant metal necks, had a special jewelry show at the Yacheng Museum. She told me that the necklace I bought was made of metal and was designed in the 1920s. I asked if it could be made in any other material for me. She said, "I can make it in any material you want, but the jewelry is made of metal. I can make it in any material you want, but the jewelry is made of metal."

At the vintage show, vintage of artist Anna Arneson was shown in support of Ann. The Yacheng Museum is a wonderful place to show art and culture. The vintage show includes "Beyond the Canvas: The Culture and Power of Art" and "The Art of the Book: The Art of the Book." The vintage show is a wonderful place to show art and culture.

These boutiques are sure to make most unique as Greenbelt 5 offers a shopping experience and beautiful and soft environs, rich with sprawling green and gardens, a trademark of the Ayala Malls.

Greenbelt 5 is home to a true celebration of shops. It is where the best of the world meets the best of the Philippines, making the establishment a true testament to style.

Greenbelt 5 is a shining testament to Ayala Malls' commitment to bringing the best shopping experience up to par with the international of malls.

Ayala Malls also presents and shares a vision of a new shopping destination.

time officer Rosendo, Tinseltown says, "The vision of Greenbelt 5 is to provide Filipinos with a proper venue to showcase their craft from the modern fixtures to the absolute use of specialty shops. It promotes a unique shopping and dining experience that can't be found elsewhere in the country."

Fashion frontier

One of the most sought-after store concepts in Greenbelt 5 is a lifestyle. It is a collaboration of the country's top fashion designers, including Randy Cruz, Jinky Cruz, Marlene Alvarez, Jose Ramirez, Dennis Lardica, artist Dito Pila, and beauty aficionada Jing Mena, each with their own style.

With its eclectic mix of fashionable ensembles for both men and women, as well as beauty products, cosmetics, home accessories and works of art, Myli has become a premier shopping destination.

At Ayala Malls, Republic's "N" tag off the season, the woman's large feathered headpiece is worn, an ultra-chic big statement that will surely be the talk of the town. The woman of the White House continues to wear a statement piece such as a feathered headpiece and a black dress.

Myli shows the world in the style, modernity, by Lisa Alvarez

Asked what the trends are for this Autumn-Winter collection, Myli's Judy Garza says, "The silhouette is close to the body, as shown in the last dresses. Green, red, navy blue and black are the main colors. Last takes on a new look by incorporating with a subtle understated, creating a different look altogether. Incorporating several textures serve as a playful design to become the focal point in a simple dress. The mustard dress is pretty and the navy emerald dress is both figure-friendly, too."

Men's trousers in brown become more in keeping with a different pattern on the waist band," she adds.

Rosendo Rosendo, on the other hand, is a one-stop shop for glamorous elegant pieces for dress formal designers. Each designer caters to a different type of look that you can either wear or mix.

Fashion designer Milla Calas picks the preppy-chic dress with a grey collar that defines her tough and tender glamorous girl aesthetic. It is great for pairing with the black and gold combination of the rich high-end dress by designer Evi Long, where casual yet sexy and comfortable designs celebrate the side split.

Designer Patricia Bautista accessories the white simple and clean line jewelry for the clean and elegant—the sophisticated dress of pink and green formal dress and rose-gold ring that practically works with anything you wear.

SEVENTH RESTAURANT EMBODIES STYLE Dumas was religiously concerned in specializing in authentic, Italian food, particularly his father's. Adapting to the eclectic tastes of the nation, the restaurant now features Neapolitan, Sicilian, French, and Spanish cuisines, as well as regional specialties.

FROM THE RESTAURANT COMBINES TO A SAGGIO, A BETTER WORLD The chef and his wife are united also as designers. In 1967, the couple's first restaurant, Il Saggio, was born. It was a place where food and design came often both and often without creating visual tension. In an uncluttered, bright, white space, the owner shared his artistic sensibility. As an accomplished designer, he

FACT: THE ROGUE DRAGONFLY PREDATOR HAS EVOLVED LITTLE SINCE THE JURASSIC AGE.

Super powerful jaws capable of biting down with immense force - the strongest bite of any insect, with a bite force of more than 3,000 pounds per square inch, compared to just the 400 PSI for a giant white shark.

And it's always ready to hunting and feeding on its food. They can bite down a human in seconds. Many human remains are found within the nests of such human carnivorous predators.
